Borgh Pottery Garden

The garden was started in 1995 and has now created a sheltered environment for birds and other wildlife – a stroll around the garden will reveal a surprising variety of plants, shrubs and interesting finds from beachcombing on the nearby Atlantic shore.

Borgh Pottery

Borgh Pottery is a studio pottery owned and run by Alex and Sue Blair.

Established in 1974 as

Stornoway Pottery, the workshop and showroom were moved to their present premises in Borve in 1978 and later became known as Borgh Pottery.

Alex and Sue use a selection of their own rich and muted glazes which have a depth and quality only to be found in high fired stoneware. For a small pottery there is a wide range of glaze colour and finish, from gloss to matt.

The pots are all handthrown or hand built using traditional techniques.

This method of working allows flexibility and scope in design; it is therefore possible to accept commissions for a variety of work in stoneware or porcelain. The stoneware is ovenproof and safe in the dishwasher.
